Excerpt: . REV. JOHN MYLES AND THE FOUNDING OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH IN MASSACHUSETTS. By a remarkable reaction in public sentiment the English people who had beheaded Charles I on the afternoon of January 30, 1649, being unable to endure longer his oppressive and tyrannical usurpation of power, were ready almost with one consent, when Cromwell died, to re-establish the throne and welcome a king. For nearly ten years they had enjoyed under the Protectorate an unusual measure of liberty and religious toleration. It is true that the government of the Great Commoner was never wholly acceptable to the people, and became, as it progressed, increasingly unpopular. The people became more and more dissatisfied, and hoped to find stability and rest by a return to royalty and the reinstatement of the Stuart line, under which they were encouraged to believe they might preserve the...
